SOME GOOD EATINGS.

When eggs are reasonable in price, if they ever are, try them glazed. Glazed Eggs.—Heat until very hot the small individual shirring dishes, greased with butter and spread with buttered crumbs to line them. Break into each a fresh egg, being careful not to break the yolk. Cover each egg with a mixture of crumbs and butter, seasoning highly with salt and paprika. Cook in a hot oven until the eggs are set. Placed in a pan of hot water they cook better. Garnish with sprigs of parsley.

Glazed Tongue.—Wash the tongue and soak it overnight. In the morning place it in a kettle with cold water to cover. Bring to the simmering point and cook until the meat is tender enough to pierce with a fork. Then set it away to cool in the water in which it was cooked. When cold remove the skin and any rough pieces; place the tongue in a deep mold, the tip fastened to the other end. Heat a pint and a half of the liquor in which it was cooked, add a cupful of tomatoes, a bay leaf, a slice of onion, pepper and salt to taste, 12 cloves and a pinch of allspice; simmer these ingredients for 20 minutes and strain, stir in one ounce of gelatin that has been previously soaked, when dissolved pour over the tongue, just covering it. Place when cold on ice to harden. When unmolded garnish with olives and parsley.

Virginia Creamed Beets.—Boil the beets until tender in unsalted water, when tender rub off the skins, slice and arrange them in a deep dish. Make a sauce, using two tablespoonfuls of butter, and when bubbling hot add two tablespoonfuls of flour, a little salt and red pepper, a spoonful of sugar and a cupful of hot cream. Heat all well and when smooth pour over the prepared beets. Serve hot.

Whipped cream, shredded almonds, powdered sugar to taste with a few drops of rose water for flavoring is especially appropriate for a sponge cake or an angel food.

Rev. H. N. Brobst of Coldwater, Ohio, who is visiting his father, Adam Brobst, in the northwestern part of the township, favored the Dispatch office with a call Wednesday.

Miss Marjory Anderson, a teacher in the Nebraska state musical institute in Lincoln, Neb., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Wraner in the eastern part of the township.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Sonedecker of Pittsburgh and Mrs. A. Hilbish and two children of Akron spent several days the past week with Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Kendig on West Main street.

W. E. Hake and family attended the annual reunion of the Kean family at the home of Robert Kean near Rosemont last Saturday. About thirty members of the family were present.

Dr. Allen C. Stafford of Beaumont, Texas, is here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Stafford, and other relatives. Dr. Stafford will take a vacation of several months and contemplate locating in Peoria, Ill., as the climate of Texas does not agree with him.

Carl Liddle, who last week graduated from Culver Military Academy and spent a few days here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Liddle, left Thursday for the Great Lakes training camp near Chicago where as a non-commissioned officer he will have a part in training young men for service in the U. S. Army.

HITS THE FARMER
No one is going to oppose the levying of war taxes that are fair. Money must be raised. It is easier to remain at home and pay than to go into the army, sacrificing business, enduring hardships, wounds and possibly death.

But the imposition of war taxes ought to be fair. Some one in Washington has a plan to penalize owners of idle land, hoping thereby to force land owners to cultivate their acres. Just to what extent this land is to be classified as idle is not made clear, but this much all know that in every county in the state in every state in the union, there are great tracts of land idle because the owners are not able to work it or hire help to do so. To tax such owners would be rank robbery and would in no way increase the food supply.

Men or land companies who are holding tracts of land for speculation could be rightfully taxed, but not the ordinary farm owner.

VACCINATION AGAINST ANTHRAX

Improvements in the Preparation of Preventive Vaccine and Serum Assist in Minimizing Loss from This Disease.

Losses from anthrax, or charbon, which at the present time is responsible for the death of large numbers of live stock in low, moist lands of a more or less mucky character, may be minimized, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, by the proper use of protective vaccine and the proper disposal of the carcasses of infected animals.

This disease affects chiefly cattle and sheep, but none of the domestic animals is exempt, and even man is sometimes a victim. Some centuries ago it is known to have caused the death of more than 60,000 persons in southern Europe. Since that time the disease has apparently become less virulent, but it is still the cause of considerable loss of stock owners. The preventive vaccine recommended by the Department of Agriculture is a development of the method devised about twenty-five years ago by Pasteur, the famous French savant. Since that time, however, scientists have succeeded in removing many of the objections to Pasteur's vaccine, and the new method is less dangerous to the animals treated and surer in its operation.

In a new publication of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin 784, detailed directions for the administration of this treatment are given. The treatment consists, in ordinary cases, of an injection under the skin on one side of the animal, of 10 cubic centimeters of anti-anthrax serum, followed immediately by a similar injection on the other side of the body, of 1 cubic centimeter of spore vaccine. In the case of sheep, which are peculiarly susceptible to the disease, the quantity of vaccine is reduced to one-fourth of a cubic centimeter.

The principals underlying this treatment is the same as that which in man has resulted in smallpox, typhoid, and other diseases. It consists in conferring upon man or animals an artificial immunity capable. Just how this immunity is conferred is a complicated scientific problem, but it is known that under certain conditions the introduction into the body of a very much weakened form of the germ that causes the disease will build up in the body a resistance that will protect it from subsequent attacks of the same disease in its normal and more virulent form. Anthrax affords an interesting example of the practical working out of this fact. A fly can easily carry a sufficient quantity of blood from an animal infected with this disease to kill a horse. Nevertheless, by repeated inoculations, scientists have succeeded in developing such a high degree of immunity in a horse that the animal has been able to withstand the injection of more than a pint of the most virulent anthrax culture obtainable. This, of course, is a much higher degree of immunity than is required to insure an animal against ordinary infection.

The cause of anthrax is a minute germ which multiplies rapidly in the body, especially in the blood, and produces poisonous substances which ordinarily cause death. The symptoms of the disease resemble, in certain respects, those of tick fever and black-leg. The differences which will enable stock owners to distinguish it from them are described in detail in the bulletin already mentioned. In acute cases, however, medicinal treatment is seldom effective. For this reason the best methods of combating the disease are to vaccinate all animals likely to be exposed to the infection and by deep burying or cremating of infected carcasses, to make certain that the infection is not allowed to establish itself in pastures.

It is a well-known fact that under certain conditions and in certain forms the germs of the disease are remarkably resistant to heat, cold, and drought. They will remain for a long time in a pasture and be capable of infecting any animals turned out on it. Ordinarily the disease is taken into the body through the mouth with food. It may, however, be absorbed through a wound or even an insignificant scratch. It is in this way that human beings usually become infected, and the name "wool-sorter's disease" is derived from the fact that men engaged in sorting wool are particularly liable to contract the disease through infection of scratches or other small wounds or abrasions on their hands.

In burying carcasses a useful precaution is to cover them with quicklime.

Where the bodies are buried instead of buried, great care should be taken to see that the operation is thoroughly done. Even the earth upon which the carcass has lain should be thoroughly and deeply buried over so that the heat will penetrate to a depth sufficient to kill the germs that may have passed into the soil with fluids from the body.

Young stock will do better if not compelled to pick their living with the old. There will also be less trouble from lice.
